

Data from a recent survey conducted online by Harris Poll and commissioned by StubHub finds that nearly one-quarter (24%) of American adults would make up an excuse to get out of school or work to attend MLB Opening Day.

Millennials are more likely to skip work for Opening Day.

30%

of Millennial Males

and 17% of female millennials (18-to-34-year-olds) say they are planning to skip work or school to attend an Opening Day game this year.

The survey asked Americans if they planned to skip work or school to attend a Major League Baseball Opening Day Game this year.

Best Opening Day Excuses: Baseball Fever?

The top excuses Americans say they would use to skip work or school to attend an Opening Day game.

24%

Would make up an excuse

13%

Take a "sick day"

7%

Take a "mental health day"

BUT when it comes to baseball...
Americans are an honest bunch

25%

say they'd tell the truth.

